MAWINS.

G.B.Ay earth, gray mist, gray sky Through vapors hurrying by,
Larger than wont, on high Floats the horned, sailow moon.
Chill aim are faintly stirred,
And far away is heard.
Ot some fresh wakened bird,
The querulous, shrill tune.

ast is the long black night, I that keen lightnings white, hunder and hoods; new light The glimmering low east stree the dense clouds part: between heir ligher ratts are seen
'ale reaches blue and green,
As the mirk curtain breaks.

hove the shadowy world, ill more and more unfarled he gathering mists upcarled Like phantoms melt and pass, a clear-obscure rescaled, rown wood, gray stream, dark field; resh, healthy odors yield Wet furrows, flowers and grass. Phe sudden, splendid gleam If one thin golden beam thous from the feathered rim
Of you hill crowned with woods, bown its embowered side,
as living waters slide,
as the great programs side.

From bush and hedge and tree loy, unrestrained and free,
